Pre-login Pages

About Page

The Bookeroo "About page" is the first page that we see when the website is opened in a web browser. It is also called the start page or the main page.

The About Page will display various hyperlinks to attract users to the different features the website can offer. The main focus of this page will be the login and register functions.

The About Page will also display a brief library of some of the books the website has available, as well as display the websites contact information.

Account registration

The Registration Page is a form or document users are required to fill to join the website and have access to the features on offer.

The registration form will require the users to provide information; such as, First Name, Last Name, Email address, Username, Password, Location and contact number

The last step before registering with the website, the user will have to agree to the Terms & Conditions and Services Policy. If they do not check these boxes they will be unable to create an account.

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the address bar displaying 'Bookeroo.com'. The page title is 'BOOKEROO'. The main heading is 'Create Account'. The form contains the following fields and elements:

- First Name: Text input field.
- Last Name: Text input field.
- Email: Text input field.
- Re-enter Email: Text input field.
- Username: Text input field (placeholder: First Name).
- Password: Text input field.
- Re-enter Password: Text input field.
- Address: Text input field with a search icon.
- Contact Number: Text input field.
- Agreement: Two checkboxes for 'I agree to Terms & Conditions' and 'I agree to the Service Policy'.
- Create an Account: A button.

Annotations on the form:

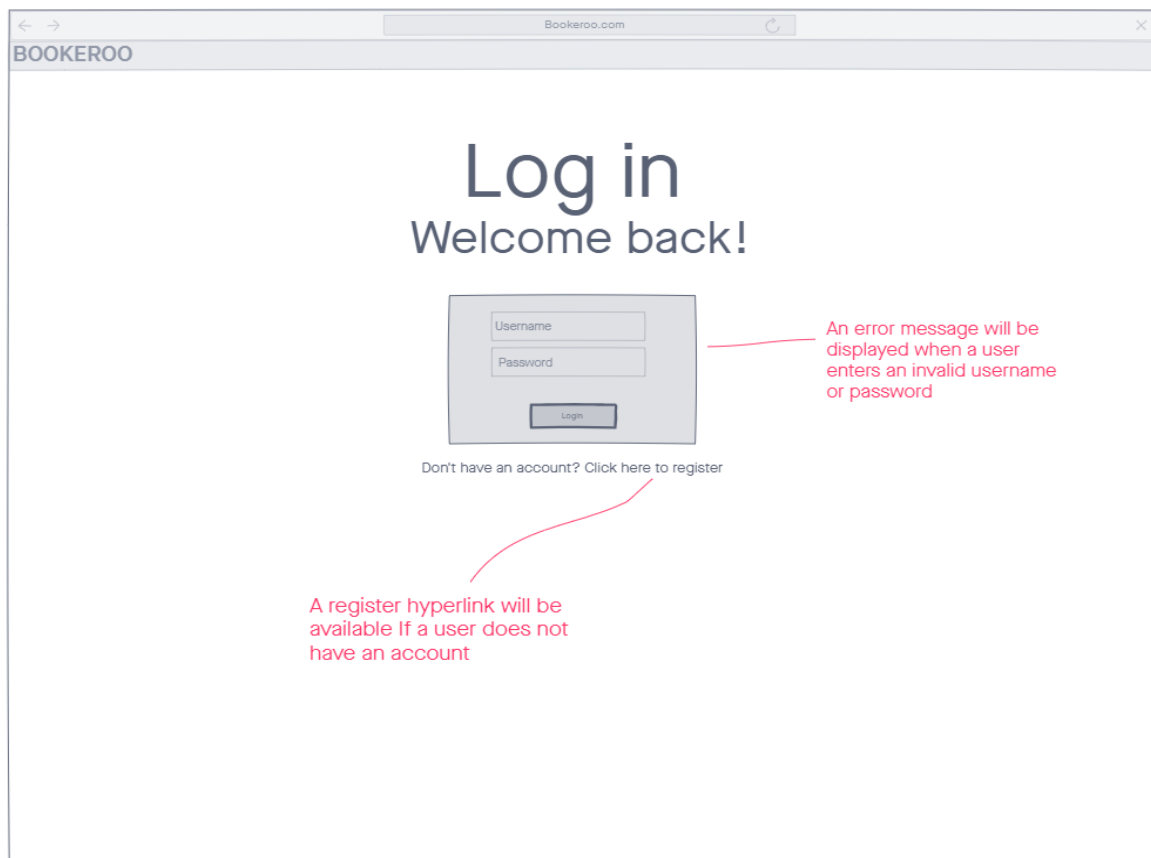

- A red bracket groups the First Name, Last Name, Email, Re-enter Email, Username, Password, and Re-enter Password fields. A red note next to it says: "Red text below will pop-up when the user types something invalid for the certain field".
- A red note next to the agreement checkboxes says: "If user doesn't check the box they won't be able to create the account".
- A red note next to the 'Create an Account' button says: "The user will not able to create an account unless all the required fields are completed and are valid".

At the bottom of the form, there is a link: "Have an account? Login Here".

Login Page

The Login Page is where registered users will go to access the website. A registered user is required to authenticate themselves by entering in their username and password.

If a user does not have login credentials, then they are required to register first

The screenshot shows a web browser window with the address bar displaying "Bookeroo.com". The page title is "BOOKEROO". The main content area features the heading "Log in" and "Welcome back!". Below this is a login form with two input fields labeled "Username" and "Password", and a "Login" button. A red line points from the "Login" button to an annotation: "An error message will be displayed when a user enters an invalid username or password". Below the login form is a link that says "Don't have an account? Click here to register". A red line points from this link to another annotation: "A register hyperlink will be available If a user does not have an account".

Order confirmation page thanks the buyer for their order, and informs them that they will be notified once their package has been shipped.

Alongside the order confirmation, a clear order summary with details such as:

- Price
- Quantity
- Subtotal
- Total Price
- Shipping and Billing information

are shown to the buyer. A clear and concise order summary ensures that the buyer is given an opportunity to confirm the details of the order, so they can quickly send a refund request in the scenario that there is/are errors in their order.
